Course Description

This course will cover US economic history from the pre-colonial period until the 2008 financial crisis. To study this long span of development, the class will be split into 3 broad sections: Pre-industrialization, which will cover pre-Colombian North American economic conditions, Atlantic contact, and the institutions that will influence later development; Industrialization, which will cover the material and economic conditions through the Industrial Revolution; and Depression/Recession, which will cover the recurrence of panics, recessions, and depressions, with a focus on the Great Depression and the 2008 financial crisis. Particular emphasis will be given to the institutional framework (political, social, and legal) directing economic development.

Course Outcomes

By the end of this course, a successful student will:

- Have an understanding of the structural change of the US economy from the pre-colonial period until the present;
- Be able to consider economic, political, and social structures holistically;
- Become familiar with the basic measures and methods of economic history;
- Develop a foundation to contextualize current economic issues in light of historical trends and previous events;
- Understand the role of government regulation and international trade in economic development;

There are no required texts for this class. Readings will consist of journal articles and book chapters posted to Canvas.

Methods/Grading

There will be weekly quizzes covering the week's material (class lectures, articles, book chapters, & videos posted to Canvas). These will represent 40% of your grade, and the lowest two will be dropped. There will also be a midterm (20%) and a final (40%).

Course Policies

The material provided through Canvas will be different from what is covered in class. As such, attendance is highly recommended. Food, drink, and computers are fine so long as they do not distract others.

The class will focus on many topics and provide room for discussion on issues that may be contentious. The primary focus will be academically and logically assessing opposing views and critical evaluation. This may result in interpersonal tension. The university's policy is as follows:

The values held most strongly by the University of Utah community are those of academic freedom and integrity as they are expressed collectively by the colleges and departments as well as individually through research and teaching and as they exist within the wider context of advanced study as commonly understood by all universities. The community also values diversity and respect, without which there can be no collegiality among faculty and students. In addition, the University community values individual rights and freedoms, including the right of each community member to adhere to individual systems of conscience, religion, and ethics. Finally, the University recognizes that with all rights come responsibilities. The University works to uphold its collective values by fostering free speech, broadening fields of inquiry, and encouraging generation of new knowledge that challenges, shapes, and enriches our collective and individual understandings. <http://regulations.utah.edu/academics/6-100.php>

I hope to cultivate a safe atmosphere for expression, discussion, and argument. I will, however, censure antagonism.

The University of Utah does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, age, status as a disabled individual, sexual orientation, gender identity/expression, genetic information or protected veteran's status, in employment, treatment, admission, access to educational programs and activities, or other University benefits or services.

Additionally, the University endeavors to provide reasonable accommodations and to ensure equal access to qualified persons with disabilities. Inquiries concerning perceived discrimination or requests for disability accommodations may be referred to the University's Title IX/ADA/Section 504 Coordinator:
